Research has proven what logic has told educators all along: students who actively participate in the learning process achieve more. But how hard is it to get young people engaged? Not as hard as you may believe. A set of educational practices, called Assessment for Learning (AFL), is gaining much popularity among experts and has proven itself to be powerful in turning good students into great students. Student Focused Learning not only explains the theory behind AFL, but also provides practical implementation strategies, real-world exercises and even sample worksheets. It is the perfect first step for those educators that are committed to engaging students and helping them take their education to the next level!
