One woman...

The first woman to ever coach a men's team to a basketball championship still finds herself with an aching void that needs filled. After a season of gawking at the tall, muscular athletes flaunting their athleticism during practice, she wishes that coaching left her more time for passion, or even one night alone with one of her guys.

Not that she would be able to pick a favorite, of course

Five men...

After the championship game, her starting five show up at her office to give her a present. They have fantasized about their sexy coach all season long, too. They are desperate to give their coach what she most needs, and they won't even make her choose her favorite.

Time to party...

Her players plan to show her that celebration is a team sport, and just like basketball, it's best when all five men are working together.
