Jimmy has been in love with his stepsister, Daisy, since he was a pre-teen. After returning from being overseas with the Navy SEALs, Jimmy has one thing on his mind: finally winning Daisy over. Unfortunately, everyone – including his mother, stepfather, best friend, and Daisy herself – think there's no way she'll possibly fall under his charms. Especially with the engagement ring on her finger. Daisy insists to herself that Jimmy is crazy, that she'll never fall in love with him. Yet, when she realizes she and her fiancé have little in common, she wonders if she made a mistake. Her fiancé cares more about his political career than being with her, which makes her feel like less of a woman. With her domineering mother insisting she marry a politician, Daisy knows she'll never get the blessing to be with Jimmy. Unfortunately, as she becomes closer to him, she realizes she may not want anyone else. Jimmy learns how to soften his infatuation with her, and Daisy learns how to soften her hatred with him. When they touch, an electric current of desire runs through their bodies – they know they can't resist each other. But will Daisy completely give in to Jimmy's persistent advances or will Jimmy just give up? Will she marry the politician or fall for the boy who always loved her? Only one thing is for sure: love doesn't go as planned.
