First Comes Love Carmen Anthony Fiore

The love story of the young engineering student at Northern Nazarene University, Brooke Chaffin, and the older college English department instructor at Northern Nazarene, Lincoln "Linc" Springfield, once again proves Shakespeare was right about true love not running smoothly. Initially, they have to overcome their age- difference gap. She's in her early twenties; he's in his late thirties. The most adamant opposition to their pairing comes from her obsessive, possessive father, who happens to be the head dean of Northern Nazarene and Linc's boss. Their meeting begins on a school-chaperoned spring-break cruise trip to Alaska where Linc, as chaperone, and Brooke, as student, become attracted to each other after he helps her locate her missing luggage and later to get Brooke and her girlfriend, Marybeth, back onto the ship in time for its departure to the next port of call. Once her father realizes the seriousness of her relationship with Linc, he tries to create barriers. And when they evolve into a serious couple and begin talking marriage, Dean Chaffin goes ballistic and turns into a determined impediment and eventual threat to their future plans. Brooke's later skiing accident delays their future plans to marry, but it helps prove that Linc is for real. He works with her during her recovery period. Her goal is to physically walk down the center aisle in church. She gets a little help from her girlfriend, Marybeth, who walks with her and is going to marry Bob Festa, a teaching colleague of Linc's at Nazarene. Bob is also waiting at the altar with Linc. It's going to be a dual wedding as planned by the four friends. But Brooke's father has other plans. He becomes a vocal and physical obstructionist, acting out his opposition to Brooke and Linc becoming man and wife. Not as long as he's got life in his aging body will he stand by and watch his only daughter marry that Springfield guy who's nearly twice Brooke's age. It takes a little help from their wedding guests in the church to solve the immediate problem and subdue Dean Chaffin, who also gets another family surprise from Mrs. Joan Chaffin, his wife, while being booked at the local police station.
